Jumping Beans
Most Mexican jumping beans come from the province of Chiapas, they are the seeds of various members of a family of awami trees listed as euphorbiaceous plants. When the seed is in bloom, the moth (Carpocapsa salitans) lays an egg in one of the tubular leaves of the plant, and the growing beans do not attain full growth until the beans are removed from the plant.

Dresses Made From Corn Suggested by New Patent
Women soon may be wearing dresses made from corn. This is suggested by a method for preparing a corn meal into a fabric, described in a patent (No. 2,156,292) granted to Lloyd C. Swallen of Terre Haute, Ind.

According to the records, however, it was late in the eighteenth century before any credence was given to the story that the corn meal is a suitable solvent and, when in solution is forced through tiny orifices from which it flows as a liquid plastic. These plastic elements are led into a coagulating bath, solution containing ordinary formaldehyde.

The formaldehyde hardens the filaments so that they can readily be withdrawn from the bath. Now the filament is heated to evaporate the formaldehyde, and then, totally reaction between the formaldehyde and give the filaments their final tough structure.

Zein filaments can be twisted together into yarns and then be woven into all sorts of textile fabrics. It is into all sorts of textile fabrics, it is made from corn by a new method. The artificial silk made from corn can be dyed in any color. A feature in the use of zein in making artificial silk is that it is made from corn by a new method. The artificial silk made from corn can be dyed in any color.

Many Animals Are Tamed Wild Cat Is Impossible

Man can tame almost any animal. There have been records of bats, porcupines, zebras, and even wild asses being tamed, while sea fish have been taught to come for food.

There remain, however, a few animals upon which man spends his efforts in vain and which refuse to be tamed. The best-known instance is the wild cat. The British wild cat is a definitely untamable, and this is the more strange because some closely allied species, such as the South African lynx, have been domesticated to some extent, related a writer in London Answers magazine.

The American bob cat, which is a lynx, is a creature which refuses to be tamed. Even kittens, taken when very young and brought up in captivity, are never able to handle.

Of all the cat tribe the most utterly savage is a rather rare creature called the fossa, which belongs to Madagascar. The natives fear it above all other wild things for its ferocity exceeds that of a leopard.

The various wild dogs are all untamable. These include the dhole of India and the spotted wild dog of South Africa. The dingos of Australia can be tamed, but this creature is believed to descend from the domesticated dog. It is a curse to the sheep farmer.

That huge weasel, the wolverine, is the strongest animal of its kind in existence, and probably the most cunning. It is said to be quite fond of man, and the wolverine has been known to attack and kill a man. Some wolves are tameable, but not the Patagonian variety. One more animal that can never be trusted is the hyena.

Thumbnails descriptions of Appomattox football season: The local boys scored early in the first period on a pass from captain Jack Turman to Guy Cabell. Turman converted the extra point to Appomattox in the lead, 7 to 0.

Alvina came back and just over a touchdown and six points, but failed on the conversion.

In the closing minutes before the half, Appomattox completed a pass to put them in a scoring position. On the next play David Christian went off tackle for a washdown. The attempt at conversion was wide and so the half ended with Appomattox leading 13 to 6.

Opening the second half, Appomattox kicked off to Altavista, and it seemed as if neither team would give ground, but in an exchange of punts, Altavista's safety man was trapped behind his own goal line for a crossroads knock out.

In the closing minutes of the last quarter, Appomattox launched a long drive which resulted in a touchdown and went off tackle for the score. The try for extra point was lost. The game ended with Appomattox having played its best game of the season and on Nov. 21 to 6.
